Yes, Brooklyn has its very own international film festival. The 12th edition -- 120 movies over 10 days -- kicks off tonight with "Breaking Upwards", an indie love story set in New York. NYU grad Daryl Wein directed and co-wrote. He also stars with his real-life partner, Zoe Lister Jones, and Olivia Thirlby of "Juno." If you can't get into tonight's show, don't worry. "Breaking Upwards" will unreel again June 13.

All shows are at the two-screen Brooklyn Heights Cinema, 70 Henry St., at Orange Street; wbff.org
